Course Charter

1

"Normal" does not exist anymore

The online experience has had its good and bad points. We will have to find out together how to marry online and in-person practices.

2

The human option is the best option

We will prioritize supporting each other as humans. We will prioritize simple solutions that make sense to the majority. We will prioritize sharing resources and communicating clearly.

3

We will remain flexible and adapt to the situation.

No one knows what the future holds and what further adaptation measures we will have to deploy. Everyone needs support and understanding as we return in person.

4

We will foster intellectual curiosity, social connections and personal accommodation.

Asynchronous content is more accessible for a variety of reasons, and face-to-face learning activities allow us to learn together and develop our community. We will try to find a balance between these two.

5

The classroom: a welcoming and pleasant space.

We will prioritize the health of all and respect for self and others to develop a positive learning environment.
